Summary of reasons for decision:

The image depicts a female with what appears to be ejaculate on her face. The Classification Office has considered whether the female subject is a young person. The age of the female is ambiguous and while there are aspects of her appearance that are youthful, she could easily be a young adult. As such she cannot unequivocally be said to be a young person. However, the unrestricted availability of the image is still likely to be injurious to the public good. While sex is not depicted, the image is overtly sexual and features a URL for a pornographic website. If children or young persons were to access the website they would be exposed to explicit sexual material. There is a common social consensus across many countries that explicit sexual material should be limited to adults because of the potential for harm to developing sexual attitudes and behaviours of young people from premature exposure to such material. If the image were to be submitted without a URL that allowed access to sexually explicit material it may well be classified differently. The image is therefore restricted to adults. This classification interferes with the right to freedom of expression as set out in the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990 but is reasonable and justified in order to prevent injury to the public good.
